

The Rebbe's Table

At City Winery's Klezmer Brunch

Dedicated to the belief that there should be more to Sunday Brunch than Bagels and Lox.

Pull up a chair at the most spirited table in town—The Rebbe's Table at City Winery's Klezmer Brunch.

Join Rabbi Dan Ain as he holds court with an eclectic group of artists and thinkers, tackling the hard questions in an easy-going setting. Ideas fly, controversy erupts, laughter prevails.

After an hour or so of discussion, the music, performed by an amazing roster of Klezmer musicians, kicks in. Add to the mix one of the best brunches around, and you've got a Sunday morning that's worth getting out of bed for!

Sunday, February 5 at 9:45am

Suzanne Tick: Reuse, Rekindle, Rejoice

Join weaver, textile designer, salvager and New Shul member Suzanne Tick and Rabbi Dan Ain for a conversation about reinvention, re-appropriation and re-energizing our lives and the discarded items in our world.

Recently commissioned for an installation for the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation offices in Seattle, Tick's work—"Refuse DC"—incorporates 3,470 hangers in a warp of sheath core vinyl, a metallic polyester thread. "Weaving holds everything together," says Tick, "fibers create protection and shelter; can be strong and stable or fragile and graceful!"

While much of her career has been spent developing textiles for commercial projects, Tick has always been interested in new or unusual materials; her fiber-optic yarn weavings are in the collections of both the Cooper-Hewitt, National Design Museum and the Museum of Arts & Design. But the pieces made with dry-cleaning detritus, which are collectively called Salvage, had their origins in Tick's exasperation with the way those bags and hangers piled up—one day, their numbers suddenly registered as a plus. — Pilar Vildas, New York Times Magazine
